“At the river’s edge sat a little jewelry store ...”

Runyan has been Vancouver’s top name in jewelry since 1917. In those 100 years, the business, its customers and the city they share have grown up.

Runyan’s Jewelers — now Erik Runyan Jewelry, with the fourth-generation owner at the helm — has passed from father to son three times. From its origins in watch repair, the store now offers spectacular diamonds, estate pieces and custom designs. A customer’s journey — how they encounter fine jewelry, research local businesses and make important purchases — often begins and ends online. Vancouver, once a quaint frontier town overlooking the Columbia River, has become a thriving hub.

Amid these changes, the Runyans’ founding principles have remained steadfast: personable expertise, unparalleled service, community pride, historical perspective, family first. These values, embodied by an intimate new retail space, create an unmatched jewelry-buying experience. Relationships started here endure for life.

Celebrating customers’ milestones, triumphs and traditions has driven the store’s past successes and its plans for the future. With each interaction, Erik Runyan Jewelers honors those connections, forges new ones and continues its mission: to help the next generation turn everyday moments into memories.
